

Filipinos in denial over flu-health exec

By Cristina V. Eguerra

MANILA AND LAOAG "IN DENIAL" about how fast the virus could spread in the country, a senior health official said yesterday.

Dr. Enrique Tanyag, the government's chief epidemiologist, said officials were having a hard time convincing many residents in the lazoang level to prepare for the deadly virus.

Health officials killed at least 60 people, mostly in Vietnam, and continued to spread from Asia to Europe despite stringent measures.

Health Secretary Francisco Duque III said he assumed it was likely the virus would reach the country if was just a question of when.

"There should be enough fear among the people," Duque, head of the Department of Health's National Epidemiology Center, said the because, "that so far, the public is still in denial."

Tanyag said the attitude came about because because there has not been a single case in the country.

Two to three weeks ago, he said, officials from the National Armed Forces had been told that there had been several 10 provinces to draw up measures about the impending arrival of bird flu in the Philippines. The problem was the emphasis was not the same, say, from residents in Belgium or from provinces that have no residents to worry about, he said.

"Some people don't even worry because they're not even in a case in their respective areas," he said. "That's not the right attitude."

He said a common question officials found hard to answer was when the virus would arrive in the country.

"It's very difficult to tell because it can happen anytime within the next two weeks or in the next several months," he said. "We don't want to start a panic but we also want to warn the people that we would have to live from here on."

Tanyag urged local governments to put up their own warning mechanisms to allow officials reporting and management of cases more before symptoms become out.

The World Health Organization earlier warned the time was ripe for another pandemic and it would most likely come from bird flu. The best tactic for the moment would be a virus capable of moving from person to person.

In the Philippines, among the quickest local governments to respond was Cebu because which is a port stop of regular trade from bird flu's main host, China.

After comfort women, Japan helps elderly

By Vito Conrera

AFTER EXTENDING APOLOGIES to Filipino "comfort women," the Japanese government has lined up more humanitarian projects for the elderly, this time not necessarily victims of World War II atrocities but of postwar deep poverty and neglect.

The Japanese Embassy in Manila said the projects include the renovation, equipment upgrade, and service improvements of the geriatric clinic at the Philippine General Hospital, the Golden Acre Home for the Aged in Quezon City and a similar home run by the Bay Pasa Aqueduct Foundation Inc. in Bulacan, Nueva Ecija.

The embassy started the "care" of Japanese compensation projects for Filipino comfort women as a limited but work-bearing move toward Philippine government officials for continuing the program from 1997 to 2002.

Tokyo's ambassador to Manila Yasuhiro Taniguchi gave recommendations to Chief Presidential Legal Council and former Justice

Undersecretary Mercedes Gutierrez and to former Social Welfare Undersecretary Belinda Manahan and Lourdes Balanes.

Taniguchi cited their roles as leaders of a task force that documented and helped Filipino victims' women obtain justice through the Asian Women's Fund.

Established in 1995, the AWF has private sector donations supported by the Japanese government which has helped Tokyo "extend assistance and support" to the aging victims, an embassy statement said.

"In the Philippines, in spite of the difficulties anticipated because of the delicacy of the issues involved, AWF activities were successfully implemented through the devoted efforts of the task force," the embassy added.

From 1997 to 2002, the AWF provided every identified former comfort woman with 2 million yen, along with "a letter of sincere apology and recommitment" from the Prime Minister of Japan, and medical and welfare support worth 1.2 million yen from the Japanese government.

White House leans toward Iraq pullout

WASHINGTON—THE WHITE HOUSE ON SATURDAY for the first time claimed ownership of an Iraq withdrawal plan, arguing that a troop pullout blueprint unveiled this past week by a Democratic senator was "remarkably similar" to its own.

It also signaled its acceptance of a recent US Senate amendment designed to give the way for a phased US military withdrawal from the violence-torn country. The statement by White House spokesman Joe McCallin came in response to a continuing published in The Washington Post by Joseph Biden, the top Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in which he said US forces will begin leaving in large numbers. Biden charged President George W. Bush has never publicly issued his own withdrawal plan and criticized calls for an early exit. The White House said many of the ideas expressed by the senator went in two.

But Biden's statement, which was released under the headline "Senate Rejects Biden's Plan For Victory In Iraq," McCallin said the Bush administration welcomed Biden's views to the debate.

McCallin said the White House now sees "a strong common-sense" building in Washington to be out of Iraq's oil-rich Iraq.

According to Biden, the United States will move about 30,000 servicemen out of the country by the end of 2006, and "a significant number" of the remaining 100,000 the year after. The blueprint also calls for having only as uncommitted "small force" under its long across the border to enable a concentration of troops, it was said. Less than two months ago, McCallin stated Democratic Representative Adam Smith, saying that he calling for an immediate withdrawal from Iraq, the congressman was "inspiring the president's long of withdrawal from Iraq," a noticeably and now. Biden's statement, released last in his 21 speech in the Post, however, got a much different reception. The Biden plan calls for preliminary work to be done in the first six months of next year, ahead of the withdrawal pullout. AFP

Suicide bomber blows up gas station in Iraq

SAMARRA, IRAQ—A SUICIDE BOMBER, OFFERING a police truck, blew up a gas station in northern Iraq Sunday, killing at least 10 people and injuring at least 20 others, according to the Iraqi government. The attack on the station in Samarra, some 120 km north of Baghdad, destroyed the petrol station and set on fire some cars, police and witnesses said. The bomber "blow up an old petrol station with three shops in the back," witnesses stated, a 25-year-old employee of the petrol station. "He entered the gas and tried to enter, but couldn't get in, he became there some other way to the way. Then he placed his body" (that is great) and blew himself up. "The explosion caught the car on fire," said, according to witnesses. The explosion killed three people, 40, who helped run the petrol station, and four more who were in the back seat of a car. "When I entered there were people with their children in the car," said. Samarra hospital doctor Haidi stated, they received the bodies of six people killed, including the bomber, six people injured. In other victims, three Iraqi soldiers were also dead north of Baghdad and a US contractor and four Iraqi were wounded in a bomb blast targeting a US military camp in the capital. The US military also announced the death of a US soldier killed in Friday when he was hit by a roadside bomb in Iraq. The death toll is at least 2,122 the number of US military personnel killed in Iraq since the March 2003 invasion, according to an AFP poll based on Pentagon figures. Meanwhile, reports in President Bush said he had suggested that some rebel groups were ready to engage in talks with the government, after he had offered for them to end violence and join a dialogue. Gopal Godse, coconspirator in Gandhi slay, dies

NEW DELHI—GOPAL VINAYAK GODSE, 78, last surviving conspirator in the assassination of Indian independence leader and pacifist Mohandas Gandhi, has died at age 78, according to reports. Godse died at his home in the city of Pune last Saturday. The Pune Press of India news agency quoted his son Pankaj Godse as saying. No cause of death was given and family members could not immediately be reached. Godse, whose brother Nathuram shot the pacifist who led India to independence, was 12 years in jail for his involvement in the 1948 killing. Godse remained unrepentant for his role in killing Gandhi—who fought for equality in a nation sharply divided by caste and religion—of the most revered man in modern history. "It was a very cruel person for the Indian," Godse said of Gandhi in a 2003 interview with The Associated Press. Godse believed Gandhi turned his back on Hindus, allowing British rule to be divided in 1947 between India and Pakistan. In the eyes of Godse and his small band of Hindu extremists, Gandhi's only for non-violence was part of a plan to allow British to be destroyed by Muslims. Godse was the last surviving member of the group that conspired to assassinate Gandhi on Jan. 30, 1948. That evening, Gandhi, a frail 78-year-old, was walking toward the prayer ground in the garden of a new Delhi home when Nathuram Godse stepped in from a van and fired three shots. Nathuram Godse and another man were hanged for Gandhi's murder. "He did not want this state to be," Godse said in the interview. "He did not want this to be the state of India, even if it was to be the end for this people." After his release from jail, Godse lived in Pune, largely living off royalties from books he wrote on Gandhi and his movement. He is survived by his wife Sharda Godse, a well-known designer, 73, and a son.

Terror plot to kill judge in Saddam trial thwarted

BAKU (AP)—IRAQI POLICE SAID THEY HAD thwarted an al-Qaida plot to kill the chief judge in charge of judging the war against ousted Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein, whose trial is set to begin on Monday after a three-week recess.

"We arrested 12 members of a cell linked to the Iraq branch of al-Qaida during a dawn raid and a house in western Baghdad," a northern Iraq police official, Ahmad Khatib, said Monday.

"They confessed during questioning to planning to kill Chief Judge Ali al-Hadi," he said. "The judge is the chief investigator in the Iraq High Tribunal, which is tasked with judging the war-crime officials, including Saddam, for crimes against humanity, war crimes and genocide."

Khatib said all the suspects were Iraqi. One, a woman, Khatib, from Saddam's home town of Tikrit is the first woman to be named in the plot.

al-Hadi was in October in Baghdad, where he was killed, he said.

al-Hadi will be a top priority when the trial of Saddam and seven former top-level Baath Party members is launched on charges of killing 140 men and youths from the Shiite sect of Iraqi, south of the capital, after the former leader ordered an execution. The charges began in 1995.

Saddam, who refused to recognize the court, and his lawyers have insisted on a guilty plea to the charges. They face the death penalty if convicted. al-Hadi is likely to face a trial of other charges, ranging from the massacre of Kurds in the north of the country in 1988, to that of Shiites in the south in 1992, and crimes committed during the war against Iran and Kuwait.

Iraq officials said they discovered the al-Qaida plot because it was linked to al-Hadi's well-documented

Winter freeze hits Europe, suspends flights, cuts power

PARIS, BELGIUM—A HEAVY WINTER FREEZE gripped parts of northern Europe on Saturday with heavy snowfalls cutting power, closing football matches and spreading air and road traffic chaos.

In Paris, the 1994 Tour de France race for most of Saturday as its main 16 kilometers finishers, while heavy snowfalls meant thousands of people in France and Germany faced plunging temperatures without electricity.

"We hope power will be restored tonight. Our trains are not their working as it," a spokesperson for Electricite de France said. Some 7,000 homes out of 37,000 that suffered power failure in France's western Vendee region on night were still without electricity by nightfall on Saturday, he added.

A quarter of a million people were also without electricity in Germany's most populous state of North Rhine-Westphalia (NRW), authorities there said on Saturday.

Some fans in the Belgian city of Liège were disappointed when a heavily attended clash between Anderlecht and Standard, two giants of the premier division, was postponed because of the cold. A Dutch league match between PSV Eindhoven and Groningen was also postponed because of heavy snow.

Air traffic also suffered from the snow and ice. Flights to and out of airports in Paris, Brussels and the north German city of Dusseldorf, the NRW metropolis, were all affected.

A Düsseldorf airport spokesperson said 26 flights had to be redirected and 25 were cancelled. "Visitors have working at the airport for 11 years and I cannot remember anything like this ever happening before," spokesperson Willem Huisman said.

Brussels airport said it too had experienced cancellations and delays, while a spokesperson for France's Aéroports de Paris said 23 flights from Charles de Gaulle airport were grounded.

"It's mostly because of snow on the runways," he said.

The Paris region saw about 5 cm of snow and in northeast France there was up to 10 cm. The climatic conditions also threw the southern half of Europe under a bad weather alert, and closed some of mountain passes.

Officials said the real danger, however, was extreme cold.

The French government declared a level one state of alert, showed when daytime temperatures remain negative and sink to between 0 and 10 degrees Celsius at night—under its so-called Winter Plan to protect the homeless, for just over a third of the country.

That came after two homeless people died in France during the past 48 hours due to the intense cold.

No stoppage of power supply in Cebu, says gov

By John B. Sumbao
JBS/Inquirer Staff

Cebu City.—THE POWER GRID IN Cebu has been tested after Cebu Electric Power Corp. (CEPCO) agreed not to suspend the operation of its power generation in Batangas in return for a 100 percent increase in its power purchase agreement (PPA) with the National Power Corp. (NPC).

Cebu Gov. Gwendolyn Garcia on Friday said the CEPCO and NPC reached a compromise agreement during a closed-door meeting held on Thursday afternoon.

She, however, declined to say what transpired during the meeting except to say that CEPCO would not shut off power to its 100 percent share of the Batangas power plant.

Among those who attended the meeting were Rep. Leo C. Lopez, NPC general manager; AJ Alcala, NPC's president; and Energy Industries Commission officials.

"They agreed between themselves that there would be no stoppage of power supply over the Batangas power plant," Lopez said.

Garcia said she would monitor the situation with officials of the National Power Corp. and the National Transmission Co. to see if it is the case all power supply to the province.

Garcia said she would monitor the situation with officials of the National Power Corp. and the National Transmission Co. to see if it is the case all power supply to the province. She said she would monitor the situation with officials of the National Power Corp. and the National Transmission Co. to see if it is the case all power supply to the province.

compensation of the power supply cost with the power distribution firm.

The agreement, which expired on Friday, is based on a power purchase agreement (PPA) between CEPCO and NPC.

"We need to a statement that it 'never shut off power supply' although it is based on PPA," Lopez said, "unacceptable because the 'plant' was high and 'grossly disadvantageous' to NPC."

It pointed out that the original terms of the PPA were agreed upon in 1997 at NPC's price of 2 percent loss of NPC's selling price.

The CEPCO applies 22 percent of the agreement of NPC, amounting to 62 percent. NPC is selling more than 200,000 kilowatts and 10,000 kilowatts in the area of Cebu, Marikina and Iloilo and the area of Marikina, Iloilo, San Francisco, Cebu, Marikina and Iloilo.

Organizers earlier announced that this year's buffet would try to break the record by feeding 50,000 people. But only 38,000 servings had been ordered by the public as of 7 p.m.

Cesar's Salad

Salad's first salad was a giant Caesar's Salad in 2001. It fed 5,000 people, leaving the record held by a Thai community in the United States.

The record fed 12,000 people and the $100,000, according to organizers.

Last year, salad's boards raised more than $50,000 people because it was topped earlier than the city recorded cases of the bacterial disease meningococcal, said

Brenda in Alibon, a city resident who lives in Alibon.

Organizers said salad was intended to promote nutrition through its vegetable-based menu. "Because that's what's good for you," said organizer Brenda in Alibon, "we're offering a healthy, affordable meal to the community and to the residents of the city who are looking for a healthy meal that is affordable and healthy." Alibon said.

La Trinidad

The vegetable producing town of La Trinidad and Baguio in Benguet are near Baguio. La Trinidad, a 20-minute drive from the city, is known for its vegetable production. It is a major vegetable trading post. Baguio is a major vegetable trading post. It is a major vegetable trading post. It is a major vegetable trading post.

The nutrition advocates have found that children living in the city are more likely to eat vegetables than those who do not. They are more likely to eat vegetables than those who do not.

Banks investing more FCDUs in T-bills, bonds, BSP says

By David C. Dunham

LOCAL BANKS ARE INVESTING more of their foreign currency deposit assets in marketable securities, such as treasury bills and dollar-denominated bonds, according to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas.

BSF says it showed that FCDUs invested in marketable securities jumped to 34.6 percent of total assets at the end of June, down from 31.7 percent in the same period last year.

On the other hand, the share of investments held by commercial banks, which account for 83.3 percent during the same period, fell to 30.8 percent from 33.3 percent during the same period, due to more registration by the BSP which took it more expensive for banks to convert foreign-currency-denominated accounts.

"Investments were likewise projected over banks as indicated by the decrease in the share of total bank portfolio (including inter-bank loans) to total assets (i.e. 30.8% from 33.3% during the same period last year)," the BSP reported.

Total assets held by the BSP's agents for all time topped at $20.22 billion at mid-June, 11 percent more than the same period last year.

About 76.7 percent of those assets were held by commercial banks, and the balance was held by the BSP.

The bulk of those assets worth $10.47 billion represented on investments in government securities, with the balance in other assets worth $9.75 billion. The major beneficiaries of the FCDU investments were Treasury bills, totaling 36.7 percent, followed by 17.8 percent in government bonds, and 10.8 percent in other securities.

Prior to the 1997 Asian crisis, banks generally held more foreign currencies, particularly in the form of deposits, managed by the central bank.

When the currency crisis hit, many banks began to hold more assets in the form of T-bills and bonds, which are considered to be more secure investments.

Foreign currency loans remained also dropped due to the pronounced impact of the Asian crisis, prompting banks to invest in higher-yielding marketable securities and avoid to cash out.

Keeping up with the neighbors

I WAS IN BANGKOK AND THAI AND LAST week, and so, naturally, I had to go to the airport and see the neighbors.

In Indonesia, I found that the crisis had hit hard, and the crisis had hit hard.

The crisis, which is just about a year old, has already taken its toll on the Thai economy. In the words, still in Indonesia, I also found myself seeing the neighbors that are around each other—something that is not yet clear.

We still have a long way to go in the Thai economy, and we are not yet clear on the situation.

RAPU RAPU POLYMETALLIC PLANT

Firm sinks in P300M for mine repair

By Christine A. Dayhouse

LAFAYETTE PHILIPPINES INC. has sunk in more than P300 million to repair its mine infrastructure and improve the operation of its Rapu-Rapu polymetallic plant in Legazpi, Albay.

The repair of a waste dump will provide the site for better drainage, said Basil Pison, Lafayette Philippines director and country manager.

Work on Friday was fast becoming slow as the waste dump would not receive equipment until materials have been thoroughly checked and repaired.

"We would not want to proceed without it because it's a waste of money," said Pison. "We would want the approval of the government, through the Department of Environment and Natural Resources, before we proceed with our mining activities."

According to the DENR Infrastructure Management Bureau, the site will have Lafayette's waste dump bank plan because the mining firm could not contain the materials that seeped through causing the pond to overflow. This situation led the company to have a bank plan approved now by the bureau.

But he said that the company will fully repair, and comply with, the recommendations of the authorities.

What said Lafayette is to own and control the activities of another independent company from a week ago.

The bank, composed of eight mining companies and geological engineers, announced its mining activities in the Rapu-Rapu.

The company will spend part of its allocated 30 million, or P20 million, budget to improve the waste dump, said Pison. The program of 500 million in capital expenditure.

The company's infrastructure located in Australia have been concerned with the accident "but the company is not concerned."

The Rapu-Rapu polymetallic project, owned by Lafayette, is one of the last mining projects to be approved by government. The plant will use natural production only this year.

The opening of the Rapu-Rapu mine plant is to be used for production, after producing 1,000 metric tons of gold. Pison said the firm hopes to resume operations in December.

Carcar's pride of place shines through Kabkaban feast

CARRAR's pride of place shines through tradition during Saturday's Kabkaban feast in Carcar.

The history of Kabkaban parallels the rise of heritage awareness in Carcar.

The local edition of the Heritage Conservation Society, the Carcar Heritage Conservation Society (CHCS), has been working for years to raise interest in the special heritage of the town.

"They believed a special event could attract attention to the town's vanishing heritage, so they selected foods and organized the first Kabkaban festival in 2000."

According to Carcar, there were modern, modern with CHCS, also proper in eating in all-heritage awareness. It took a long time for locals to believe their town's heritage was unique and only in Carcar but in the Philippines as well. The residents and local government had other development ideas for the town. Progress had been on their agenda.

Since 2000, CHCS and the local government struggled with conflicting heritage vision. The conflict ended last year when Carcar's local government pushed both sides toward solving their vision to recognize and preserve their heritage.

The first step was to declare Carcar a heritage town.

The provincial and local governments, together with CHCS, agreed their support and commitment to preserve the town's heritage by passing an ordinance, the first such in Carcar. It was signed just a few weeks before this year's Kabkaban.

With the passing of the ordinance, private public agreement, essential to the success of heritage projects, was finally attained.

The provincial and local governments provided generous subsidies for underwriting this year's festival and asked CHCS members to plan and organize the 2003 festival.

Kabkaban Festival this year signified the start of cooperation of all sectors to preserve heritage in Carcar. There was much to celebrate.

The day kicked off with a sale of artwork by Carcar artists and Carcar artists, who donated their proceeds to fund CHCS projects.

Butch Gacera, a nationally acclaimed award-winning artist from Carcar, is a member of CHCS.

Jaime Zobel pays tribute to modernist pioneer Fernando Zobel

In notes accompanying the 2001 exhibit "Side to Light," he says: "I use light not as an accomplice, but as a photographer's theme. I do side light what the improvisation did—I paint with it. It becomes the handle with an expressive quality—direct, yet quite efficient—that results in the

In his remarks at the opening of the exhibit in Madrid, he confessed: "Light is important to me because it unifies, both physically and spiritually, levels of being. My most profound moments of gratitude have happened at that first hour when the night ends and the morning light
